Postal Dispute and Decimalisation

Advice to people who buy National Insurance stamps

Because of decimalisation all £sd National Insurance stamps are being withdrawn from sale when Post Offices close for the changeover at 1 pm today, Friday 12 February. They will not be available anywhere after this.

Owing to the postal dispute supplies of £sd National Insurance stamps have already been exhausted at some Sub-Post Offices, and it has not been possible to distribute the new decimal stamps in time for the changeover.

Decimal National Insurance stamps cannot be distributed until after the settlement of the dispute, but should be available in most places a few days after normal working is resumed. £sd stamps may be used up after the changeover, and decimal stamps may be used for earlier weeks if necessary.

An employer who is unable to buy stamps and therefore cannot stamp up to date the card of a person who leaves his employment or who dies, should get an emergency card from the local office when stamps become available again and stamp it as required.

Meantime he should :

- keep a note of the employee's name and National Insurance number and the dates of the unstamped weeks;
- in the case of a person who leaves, return the card to him and explain that the contributions will be paid later;
- in the case of a person who has died, arrange for the card to be taken to the local office.

Cash for contributions should not be taken to Social Security Offices, but should be retained until stamps are once more on sale. When stamps are again available all cards must be stamped up to date as soon as possible.

Announcement 11th March 1971

Advice to people who buy National Insurance Stamps

National Insurance stamps will be available from all Post Offices within the next few days. This will end the special arrangements under which the stamping of national insurance cards could be deferred.

Only decimal stamps will be on sale and these should be used to pay all outstanding contributions, including those due for any weeks before February 15 (D Day) for which £ s d stamps could not be obtained.

National Insurance cards expiring on February 28 should now be stamped and exchanged without delay.

During the postal dispute employers may not have been able to stamp the cards of people who left their employment, or who died. Emergency cards on which to pay the missing contributions can be obtained from the local Social Security office. These cards should be stamped and returned, together with a list in duplicate showing the following particulars for each person:

- Name
- National Insurance number
- Value of the contributions paid
- Period covered
